Jean has lived in Southport since January. Her home here is her 30th since she left grad school. Jean says that if she lives another 50 years she won't move again. Why has she moved so much? Well, Jean's newspaper career of more than 40 years took her everywhere. Her career included serving as an investigative and projects reporter and editor for The Associated Press, New York Newsday, and the St. Petersburg Times (now called the Tampa Bay Times), among others. Jean has won multiple awards, including eight nominations for the Pulitzer Prize. In her literary life Jean wrote two stand-alone thrillers then moved to the Deuce Mora Mystery series. The fifth in that series will be published in January, and the audio books will be released early next year. Her book Maximum Impact was a Pulitzer Prize nominee. Jean lives in Southport, N.C. and Chicago.
